Long Rejects Ferry Company Sale Proposal

MARTINEZ, Feb. 15.—Possibility of the sale of the Richmond-San Rafael Ferry Company to Roy O. Long, successful bidder for a Contra Costa-Marin county bridge franchise, unless it is on the terms Long presented before the board of supervisors while contesting with Charles Van Damme, ferry company head, for the span permit, seemed today to be more remote than ever.

"Declining to accept a sale offer presented to him last night by Van Damme, Long through his attorneys, A. F. Bray and J. E. Bray and J. E. Rodgers, today announced that he is still willing to abide by the offer he made, before the board of supervisors."

Van Damme's offer of sale, communicated to ferry stockholders today, prescribed that Long and his associates in the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, Inc., to which Long is to assign the franchise, must deposit $50,000 of the $1,250,000 purchase price by noon tomorrow and $575,000 additional by March 2. The offer further prescribes that the remainder of the purchase price is to be paid when the Long bridge is built and operating and that delivery of the ferry company's physical properties will then be made. The offer binds the ferry company to pay Long and his associates five per cent interest on the money they deposit and specifies that until the final payment is made the ferry is to be operated by the ferry company for the benefit of its stockholders.

The offer, it is understood, is intended by the ferry company as (Continued on Page Eight)

JURY CLEARS DEATH CAR DRIVER

Hill Counsel Drowns While Jury Ballots On Matricide

(By Universal Service)
OTTAWA, Ill., Feb. 15.—Lee O'Neill Browne, chief of defense counsel for Harry Hill, youthful matricide, was drowned in the Fox river here this afternoon, just as the jury in the case was hearing a verdict.

Browne, relieved of his arduous court tasks during the trial, was supervising the construction of a fence on his estate, which overlooks the Fox river.

He lost his balance and fell down a deep ravine into the river. He was whirled into the middle of it, and before anyone could go to his assistance, he had been swirled from the Fox river into the rushing, high waters of the Illinois river.

His body was recovered shortly afterward, and although a pulmotor squad began work over him, in an effort to resuscitate him, there was no sign of life.

Mr. Browne was a democratic leader in the state legislature, having been elected for consecutive terms since 1900.

His death created a sad scene in the court room, where his magnetic personality had predominated during the past few weeks of the Harry Hill trial. Colleagues, prosecutors and judges all were shocked by the announcement of his death.

Meanwhile, the jury continued to debate the fate of young Hill. It was reported the talemens stood 11 to 1 for conviction, but apparently hopelessly deadlocked.

SEAMAN DIES FROM INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

No blame was fixed by a coroner's jury last night in Martinez at an inquest into the death of Walter Ruchl.

Ruchl, 44, 1001 Fourth street, San Francisco, an engineer on the steamer San Jose, died at the county hospital in Martinez yesterday of injuries he sustained early Tuesday when an automobile driven by Daniel C. Seed, 24, also an engineer on the San Jose, plunged into a creek bed on the Franklin Canyon highway after crashing over a concrete embankment two feet in height. Ruchl had his skull fractured and suffered internal injuries.

The jury last night found that death was due to shock and severe injuries and held the cause to be accidental. Coroner Aubrey Wilson presided.

Following questioning of Seed and Deputy Sheriff J. M. Joseph and Constable B. B. Rogers, investigating officers, Deputy District Attorney R. L. Boyer announced that consideration of a charge of manslaughter against Seed had been dropped.

Seed was arrested on a charge of reckless driving, pleaded guilty yesterday and was fined $250 by Justice of the Peace Frank Glass with the alternative of a term of $250 days in the county jail. He expected to pay the fine today.

Succumbs

J. HULANSKI, former Richmond editor, author and mining promoter who passed away at his home here yesterday.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal To Richmond Editor, Author

Funeral services for Frederick J. Hulaniski, author, writer, newspaper publisher, and mining engineer, who died at the family home, 1330 Twenty-fourth street yesterday will be held from the chapel of Wilson and Kratzer, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Rev. H. K. Sanborn, pastor of St. George Presbyterian Church, will conduct the services and interment will be in Sunset View cemetery.

Death resulted from heart failure, following an attack of influenza.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ruth Hulaniski and three daughters, Mrs. Henry Engelking, (Opal), 1120 Roosevelt; Mrs. B. L. Lewis (Ruth), Santa Rosa; and Mrs. Willard Pogue (Marcia) of 420 Tuller street.

CHECK PASSER TAKES STAND IN RIOT TRIAL

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 15.—With the suddenness of a thunderbolt one of the six convicts on trial here for the murder of Ray Singleton, a guard at Folsom prison on Thanksgiving day, turned state's evidence today against his fellow prisoners.

Down crashed the defense. Down went the whole fabric of evidence by which the six convicts hoped to beat the gallows.

"SPILLS THE WORKS"

Al Stewart, their pal, "spilled the works." — Al Stewart, alias "Zeb Saunders," the sly, sly-faced forger from Los Angeles and fellow defendant who had sat elbow to elbow with them throughout the long weeks of the trial—and bunked each night with them in the dungeon of Folsom.

Tonight, he is lodged in a separate cell. His life would not be worth a lead nickel, the guards say, if Tony Brown and the rest of the gang ever got their fingers on him.

Masonic Temple Ass'n. Reelects Board Officers

At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Masonic temple held last night in Masonic temple, the same board was re-elected for the ensuing year.

Approval of the work carried on during the past year was given by the board. Those re-elected to office were E. M. Downer, C. Olney, W. J. Richards, A. B. Jones, Carl Alexander, Howard Flint, Lud Johnson, Walter T. Helms and H. E. Drummond. E. M. Downer presided at the meeting.

Mendelssohn Show Reserved Seats Placed On Sale

With but two practice nights, remaining before the final dress rehearsal, members of the cast and chorus of the Mendelssohn club opera: "In the Garden of the Shah," rehearsed last night in Roosevelt junior high school auditorium. Dress rehearsal will be held Sunday and the performances, long awaited by Richmond will be held in the California Theatre next Monday and Tuesday nights.

Tickets have been put on sale for the play and reserved seats tickets may be secured at Richard's Music Store, 816 Macdonald avenue. Those who wish to change their regular tickets for reserved seat tickets may get them at the same place according to an announcement by Mrs. James A. McVittie, publicity chairman of the event.

Past Chancellor Night Planned By Pythians

Announcement that next Wednesday night would be Past Chancellors' night, with A. W. Barker in charge of the affair, was made after the meeting of Richmond lodge No. 13, Knights of Pythias, in Brotherhood hall last night. A membership committee headed by George R. Black and assisted by G. C. Donnelly, E. S. Geigold, O. Carroll, and W. H. Long was appointed by E. S. Geigold to take charge of the membership business of the lodge. Next Monday night members of the lodge plan to visit the Selby lodge at Crockett.

Improvement Ass'n. Enjoys Program

Mutual Improvement Association were entertained by Sister Johnson and Sister Ellsworth, the former by a solo and the latter with musical numbers after the meeting held in Redman hall last night. The Young Men's division made plans to play the Berkeley association a game of basketball tonight in the gymnasium of Trinity church. Peter Gengler presided and L. J. Alkens conducted the meeting last night.

JUDGE DENIES SUIT RETRIAL

MARTINEZ, Feb. 15.—With Superior Judge A. B. McKenney denying a new trial of the so-called "red-brick house suit," the Crockett Land & Cattle Company was preparing today to appeal to the Appellate Court a decision by the Superior Court refusing the company's plea in an action against the American Toll Bridge Company to quiet title to a $10,000 home, located under the Carquinez Strait bridge Crockett approach.

The home is located on a strip of ground embracing seven-tenths of an acre, which the bridge company condemned for an approach to the span. The home was purchased by the bridge firm from Hans A. Miller and following construction of the span was moved to the site it now occupies.

The cattle company, contending that the bridge firm secured only an easement for a span approach and not title to the property, claimed that the home belonged to it and instituted suit to have legal title established. Judge McKenney held that the structure was necessary to operation of the bridge and refused the cattle company's plea.

IN RICHMOND 15 YEARS

Fifteen years ago he came to Richmond and took an active part in the development of the city and the county. The Richmond Morning News was published by him until a merger was effected, after which he wrote editorials for the Record-Herald.

His "Thinkograph" published in book form was later published monthly in San Francisco, a work comparable to Elbert Hubbard's "Philistine." His articles were syndicated, but war time publications changed the form of newspapers and his column was discontinued.

MINING INTERESTS

During his later years he was particularly interested in mining. The mine engaging his closest attention was the Wonder Mine near Grass Valley, California.

His fearless character and his advanced views of affairs made him a well and widely known man. Among his works was a history of Contra Costa county published in 1917. None of his writings reveal an account of his own attractive life.

SWEDISH SHIP DOCKS

The Swedish freighter, Anten, of the General Steamship company, docked at the Farr Terminal corporation wharf to take on a cargo of petroleum products and will sail for Australia as soon as work of loading the cargo is complete.

RUNNING OVER THE PRESIDENT

The rejoicement of the democratic spell-binders over the way congress, as they put it, is running over the president may turn out to be a little premature. Because of the constant possibilities of coalitions between the insurgents and the democrats, congress has been trying to run over the president since Mr. Coolidge first took office. Achievements of this nature, however, are only valuable when a direct profit accrues to the promoters. There can be no substantial denial that every time congress bucks the president it is congress that loses and the president who gains.

Even those who are promoting the cabals privately admit that the public estimation of the president is higher than ever. Mr. Coolidge has an uncanny faculty of sensing the public mind and the prediction can be made here now that if congress at this session succeeds in carrying out the special upsets which it is planning for the president his course will again be approved by the voters at large.

Senator McMaster, for example, with democratic aid, is anxious to embark the country on a program of downward tariff revision and the suggestion has been made to hitch it as a rider to the tax reduction bill. Already the people of McMaster's own state are up in arms over this project, and the people of the country when it is all over, will agree with the president that the eye of a presidential campaign is not the time to accomplish sane tariff readjustments.

Again certain senators are discussing the possibility of enactment of legislation providing that ship sales be made by the shipping board only by unanimous vote of the entire board which, of course, means that no ships at all will be sold. In the meantime, even while blocking the transfer of ships to private ownership, millions of dollars are being asked to recondition old ships and build new ones.

In 1924, and at different times since, the president has firmly declared his ambition to take the government out of the shipping business and open the way for the entry of private ownership and administration. The people of the country have made plain that they agree with the president. For that reason, any victory in upsetting the president's plans will inevitably prove a boomerang. As between a president who has eliminated himself from the field of candidates and congressmen anxious for re-election, there can be no real question as to which side the public will elect to follow.

The Chinese do everything backward. They classified a bevy of girls as "red" the other day because the maids had bobbed hair. In the Christian nations, it is long hair which is usually associated with Bolshevism—also long whiskers.

Ohio has at least four possible presidential candidates which would be enough to start a general massacre in Mexico.

Paris Couturiers Design Gowns For Palm Beach Wear

In the mid-season collections, couturiers have borne in mind the needs of the smart Parisienne who is planning her wardrobe for the Riviera, as well as her American cousin who winters in Palm Beach. One of the smartest sports ensembles shown by Worth in the mid-season collection is "sans couture" made of a bright shade of rose kasha, almost an American Beauty shade, with a decided flare to the long coat and a long roll collar of natural lynx. The coat is lined with beige kasha, and though very warm, is light in weight. Worn with this long coat is a simple frock of the same shade, which has a decided flare in the skirt, no belt, and buttons down the entire length.

"Sword" (Bette) is the appropriate name of a new Worth evening gown made for an American client who will spend the winter months at Palm Beach. The original gown was shown in a lovely shade of red, but the American chose to have it made for her in pale blue. It is a simple, elegant, and chic design of the same shade. The décolleté is round and fairly high, cutting at a lower V in the back. The blouse is plain, with a geometrical design of scallops running from the right shoulder diagonally to the bottom of the skirt, which, by the way, is quite full and much longer in the back than front. A wide sash of dull blue velvet, with a huge bow and streamers on the left side, is further embellished with an ornamental diamond holding the bow in place and "dangle" dangles of diamond reaching almost to the hem and finished at the bottom with large pale blue stones.

Another successful evening gown is "L'Oracle," a crepe gown in very dark blue, really a "midnight" blue, embroidered all over in small patterns with diamonds. It has a wide belt and large bow on the left hip, the ends of which form a deep dip on the side. These ends are made more prominent by the silver embroidery on them.

PRACTICAL BAG

A personal laundry bag for every member of the family is one of the marks of a well-ordered household and when one as attractive as this can be made for so little as ten cents, there is no reason for not having them.

The bag illustrated costs about that. It is made out of an empty flour bag, bought from almost any baker. To remove the stamping, cover the inked spots with lard or soap them in kerosene overnight. Then wash the bag out in lukewarm water. A single sack, folded in half, is large enough for the ordinary laundry bag for personal use. Two probably will be needed if the bag is for household use, such as sheets and table cloths. This bag has several good features. The top is stitched closed, with a heading and a case for running in a small rod or narrow slit of wood, such as seen in window blinds.

The soiled articles are put in through the slash in front and taken out by undoing the flap at the bottom. The word "LAUNDRY" may be worked in cross-stitch or the personal element can be emphasized by working in the owner's initials. The sides of the bag, the flap and the slashed opening are bound in colored bias tape.

Another style laundry bag has the usual opening at the top with a draw-string. Its unique feature, however, is an outside pocket twelve or fifteen inches deep. This is stitched down the middle to the front of the bag before it is made, forming two pockets, one for handkerchiefs and the other for silk hose. This saves a lot of sorting when wash day comes around. Like the other bag, it is made from a flour sack, bound with bias tape and decorated with some simple cross-stitch or outline pattern.

These bags will wear exceptionally well, and can be tubbed as frequently as the garments they are made to hold.

My little girl, 2 years old, with her doll, named Dorothy in her arms, was following a newly hatched brood of chickens. She kept so very close to them that the mother hen ruffled up her feathers and ran at her. She, screaming and crying, ran for dear life. "Why," I said innocently, "what is the matter?" She cried "Doddie's afraid of the old hen."

GOOD MANNERS

Q. At a theatre or concert is it right for a young man to expect a girl to hold his hat during the performance?

A. Decidedly not. The young man who does displays very bad taste. He should find a place for his hat—or hold it himself.

Q. I am invited to an informal dinner and dancing party at the home of a friend. Should I wear a tuxedo or an ordinary suit?

A. Either. If in doubt as to whether the other men will wear business clothes make inquiry of your hostess.

BOILED ALL OVER

AFFAIRS OF

Some wives think of their husbands only as meal tickets. They seem to think that nothing else but earning capacity should be considered in choosing—or leaving—a husband.

Dear Patricia Lee:

When I first met my husband in south Philadelphia five years ago he was contender for the middleweight boxing championship of the world. When I promised to marry him, I persuaded him to give up his boxing because he only was disfiguring himself and was spending the money he earned in the ring foolishly. He got a job in the shipyards at $22 a week. He took me to live with his people, and I was treated very well by them. I realized, however, that he was not making enough money to keep me, as I was a big spender on clothes. I persuaded him to try a comeback in the ring, but this did not work out, as he was too fat and could not train down. After several weeks, he had to go back to his old job at $20 a week. So I left him and went back to my mother. I was making $24 a week myself, working. Some one told me that I could get maintenance from my husband, so I took it to court and was given $5 a week. He paid about $100 and then stopped. I got out a warrant for him, but he left town.

What shall I do? I really do not care for my husband any more. I have met some one else who has money, and I would like to marry him.

Your letter is one of the most selfish that I have read in a long time. Evidently you feel that some man owes you a living and that you owe him nothing at all. You admit that it was on your advice that your husband gave up a career that he liked, and one which could at least have given him a good training job later, for work for which he was not fitted and consequently underpaid. And, after having done this for you, you not only leave him but ask for maintenance when you are young and perfectly capable of the responsibility of your own home is up to them, even if it is nothing more than being a good sport and keeping from being extravagant.

What should you do? Certainly, not prosecute your husband and think a long while before you decide that you are entitled to a divorce. It won't hurt you to work for a time. You had your chance at marriage and made a failure of it.

Mrs. Newlywed Is Advised On Winter Care Of Ice-Box

Dear Mrs. Hall-Deane—

I am a "brand new" housekeeper and would appreciate it if you would give me a few hints on the care of my refrigerator during the cold months. I do not take ice regularly, and do not use the refrigerator every day. Occasionally, I use it for storing away foods from one meal to another, but I am careful to avoid foods with penetrating odors. In spite of this, my refrigerator has taken on a somewhat peculiar and disagreeable odor. Will you please tell me what I should use to clean it and keep it sanitary and odorless?—Mrs. D. F. L.

In the first place, it's a very bad idea to use the refrigerator for storing foodstuffs—unless you have ice in it! If you feel that you cannot afford ice during the winter months you will do well to adopt the plan of many other housekeepers—the use of a "window" refrigerator.

The refrigerator—if it is to be letter-perfect as far as sanitation is concerned—should be given just as much care in the winter as in the summer, for, in the average home, it gets no vacation.

Although summer is its busiest season, most households rely upon it the whole year through as the only safe place for perishable foods. The good housekeeper, knowing the importance of cleanliness in guarding the safety of the family food supply, cleans her refrigerator every week as regularly through the rest of the year as she does in the summer.

Dark, damp corners in which forgotten particles of food take refuge are dangerous to health and safety. Harmful bacteria may develop, and odors arise which taint the milk and other food.

If any food has spoiled in the refrigerator, use scalding hot water with soap to remove all effects and follow this with a cold rinse to reduce the temperature of the walls. As a general rule, warm soapy water is the best cleansing medium.

After removing the food, take out the ice and wrap it. Remove racks from the ice chamber and scrub them. Scrub the ice chamber and rinse it. Remove drain pipe and trap, scour inside and out, using a brush for the inside and rinse. Replace all the parts and put the ice back.

Remove the shelves from the food chamber, and scrub with a brush and soapy water. Rinse and dry, and set them in the sunshine or open air. Then scrub the food chamber and the inside of the door, using a skewer for corners. Rinse and dry, and replace shelves and foot.

Do You Know That—

By MRS. HALL-DEANE

A gleaming topaz suspended on a slender gold chain is a pretty way of lending class and color to an afternoon frock of green velvet.

Something new in wall decorations is the panel in Tree of Life design embroidered on heavy natural-color linen in simple stitches with tapestry wool of softly blended colors.

Many of the new evening and afternoon frocks wear jeweled belts with jeweled shoulder pin to match. Unusually attractive is a belt made up of rhinestone strands caught together at intervals with a colorful butterfly. There's a butterfly holder pin to match.

tion of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

Cantor Rabinowitz has trained his son, Jackie, to sing the Hebrew songs of the Synagogue. On the Eve of the Day of Atonement, he finds Jackie singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jackie runs away. Ten years elapse. Jackie, now Jack Robin, a jazz singer, goes on his back, meets Mary Dale, a dancer, who obtains a part for him in her vaudeville act. Jack's happiness is complete until, in Chicago, Mary receives an offer to star in a New York musical show. Then the jazz singer realizes that she is leaving him. He confides in his friend, Buster Billings.

"Well, kid, out with it! What'd he have to say?" Buster pitted his voice against the busy hum of the streets.

"Buster, Mary's had a marvelous offer, and she's leaving for New York to start rehearsals for a new musical show." Jack tried to keep the note of gladness in his voice but the effect was somewhat unsuccessful. "Isn't that fine?" he added a bit lamely.

"Sure is," Buster looked at his friend as though speculating as to his reception of the news. "Whose show is it?"

"Harry Lee's. He saw Mary's act in Brooklyn some time ago, and liked her work. She just got the wire this afternoon. Of course, I think it's a great chance for her, but I'm going to miss her." Jack looked away, not anxious to reveal the hurt that he felt, even to his friend.

"That sure is swell," Buster admitted. "An' I hope Mary gets over. But you know what I told you, kid—you've got a chance for Broadway money, an' don't let anything put you off the track. Sure, you're goin' to miss Mary. But wait 'til you strike the big time. You ain't going to miss nothing, then."

Jack nodded, but Buster's words were small comfort. For the first time in years he began to feel actually homesick. Down in his heart there came a longing for old, familiar friends; for the comfort his mother had always afforded him whenever he had been hurt. He wanted to bury his head in his troubles. Instead he forced himself to walk steadily along the Avenue, keeping pace with Buster.

As they came to a tall, modern building Jack's eyes caught sight of a lobby display announcing a special matinee concert given by Cantor Rabinowitz. The placard brought him to a stop, for the moment. He glanced hurriedly at his wrist watch. It was just four thirty. The concert would be over in the last quarter of an hour or so. That would give him time to catch the last numbers of the musicale.

He turned to Buster as he saw the latter watching him questioning. "I—I forgot something at the theatre, Buster," he said, hesitatingly. "Suppose you run along. I'll meet you at the hotel. I'll be right over."

"Sure, kid, that's all right. See you later," Buster waved and sauntered on along the street. He had his own ideas as to why Jack was returning to the theatre, but he asked no questions.

Buster's ideas were, however, far from right. For Jack turned as though to retrace his steps, but the moment he saw that Buster was lost in the crowd he stepped hurriedly into the lobby of the concert hall, dashed to the box office and purchased a ticket for the performance. The Cantor, he just realized a song and had disappeared into the wings. In the semi-gloom Jack found his seat and waited for the reappearance of the performer.

Looking about him Jack saw many people of his own race; well dressed music lovers who could afford to spend the afternoon at a concert. He thought of the little Synagogue back on the East Side where he had once sung these chants and prayers of his people. It seemed not at all strange to him that just as the thoughts of his home had come recurring to him suddenly this music awaited him. It appeared, rather than reasonable, as though the gods were wise and watched the movements of these insects called humans. And he waited patiently for the next number, without even consulting his program.

"The next and last number to be sung by Cantor Rabinowitz," a gentleman in afternoon clothes was now announcing from the platform. "Will be the famous 'Eli, Eli.' The man bowed and retired.

The words made Jack start. "Eli, Eli"—the great cry of a troubled people. His people, Jack thought. How fitting it seemed that he should be sitting here now. He had never told his associates in the theatre of his home or his parents. He had never talked of the years of training given him by his father that he might be a Cantor. He had felt that he was a part of the theatre—that the old years had been completely lost to him. He had even felt a little queer about coming into the concert and it was for that reason that he had deserted Buster. And now, here he sat, there, he could feel all the old impulses rising; all the old sentiments stirring. This belonged to him.

"Eli—Eli," the Cantor's voice rolled out over the auditorium. The great Wall of Jericho, with its cold timeworn stones warmed with the pressure of human forms. Women with all enveloping shawls of soft, warm colors; leaning, their foreheads against the bulwarks. Bearded rabbis with the Talmud before them reciting prayers. "Eli—Eli," the cry from the heart.

Jack sat staring, his eyes fixed hypnotically on the singer. To all outward appearance he was a well dressed, good-looking young man, spending an afternoon in a Chicago concert hall listening to a group of Hebrew songs sung by a great Cantor. But to himself Jack was once more a child, waiting in the Orchard Street Synagogue for his father's voice. The form on the platform had assumed the shape of another person; faded in shivering vibrations into the figure of Cantor Rabinowitz. The extensively dressed people about him became one with the familiar figures of his own temple.

Now he stood on the platform with the other boys of the School to sing the songs his father had taught him. He saw the Cantor's tall figure draped in the Prayer Shawl giving the signal for the beginning of the chant. He heard his own young voice surging forth. He raised his eyes to the balcony and caught the gleam of his mother's shawled figure swaying among the women. He heard the Rabbi preaching the word of God.

And then the lights were bright and Jack was wiping the tears from his eyes. The audience was stumbling towards the doors, struggling with hats and coats. Seats were being pushed up, and the noisy call of the stragglers vied with the bustle of the auditorium. Slowly Jack rose and followed the crowds out into the darkening evening.

Mrs. Rabinowitz moved hurriedly about the apartment dusting, brushing the floors and carpets, and tantalizing something in a big pot with a big spoon. That sent pungent odors throughout the house. "Home in a few days," home in a few days," she kept repeating to herself again and again. A knock at the door sent her scurrying.

"Ach! Hello, Clarence," she said disappointedly. A young man clad in linen knickerbockers and vivid golf socks, topped by a blue and white blazer stepped into the room.

"Hello, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Clarence entered carrying a bundle under one arm. "I took the afternoon off. It's the Cantor's birthday so I called a meeting of the choir."

"Sh! The Cantor's asleep," Mrs. Rabinowitz cautioned. "Go tired he is today from teaching."

"Well, we all contributed toward a little present, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Clarence held out his parcel. "So will you please present this to the Cantor with our best wishes for his continued happiness, peace, prosperity, longevity and the consistent and increasing use of his vocal chords." The young man took a deep breath and deposited his bundle in the waiting arms of his hostess.

CIVIL WAR TALE FEATURES BILL AT CALIFORNIA

The attraction at the California Theatre today is Dolores Costello in Warner Bros. screen revival of Belasco's thrilling melodrama "The Heart of Maryland." Unusually beautiful settings and superb photography a strong story and a large and competent cast all tend to make the picture a master piece. Lincoln, Lee, Grant, and other celebrities of the period are impersonated with amazing faithfulness and the tense and electric of the times is captured to the degree of uncanniness. But after all it is the delicate and shimmering loveliness of Miss Costello, with her subtle interpretations of all shades of feeling, which make the piece so glamorous and so poignant. No one can afford to miss seeing Dolores Costello in "The Heart of Maryland."

Other features on the same program include "Listen Lena," a seemingly funny Mermaid comedy, "Gray Days," a scenic novelty current news events; and "Gray Days," at the huge organ.

Coming tomorrow, Syd Chaplin in his latest laugh riot "The Missing Link."

School nurse, says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking naps, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when naps should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Naps is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every daughter has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SHIRLEY MASON STAR OF FILM AT RICHMOND

Thursday marks the departure of "Sally in Our Alley," the Columbia Pictures special production, which is now playing at the Richmond Theatre. This picture has Shirley Mason in her usual type of role except that in this picture she will no doubt leave a greater impression than even her last success, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady." Richard Arlen, in arrangement with the Paramount company, will gain much ground by his performance in this picture in his rise to screen fame. "Sally in Our Alley" was conceived from the song by that name written in the eighteenth century. The story was modernized and in the picture version we find not only a modern, but a human and interesting story.

Besides Shirley Mason and Richard Arlen, we have Alec Francis, William H. Strauss, Paul Panzer, Kathryn Williams, Florence Turner and Harry Crocker in the supporting roles.

Alec Francis, one of the most noted character actors on the screen, gives a delightful portrayal of a Scotchman; while William Strauss and Paul Panzer are imitators respectively, in a Jewish and Italian role.

The direction was ably handled by Walter Lang, who shows a sympathetic understanding and commendable restraint in his wielding of the megaphone. Other film features on the same program include "Jane Missed Out," a roaring comedy; and current news events.

The

SIERRA LEONE LAW TO FREE 215,000 SLAVES

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Freedom for slaves has been extended by legislative enactment to 215,000 persons in the Sierra Leone Protectorate.

While the legal measures for the emancipation became effective at the first of the year, it is not believed the actual freeing of the entire body of slaves may be accomplished for some time. Opinion is expressed that the carrying out of the legislation passed to effect the emancipation must be a matter of time.

Lady Simon, a leader of the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protection Society, expressed doubts here recently as to the possibility of effecting an immediate emancipation. She furthermore declared this phase of the question was of less importance than others. She pointed out:

MAKE COUNTRY STRONGER
"What is even more important than the question of the immediate effects of the emancipation laws is the administrative framework which is needed if the consequent economic advantages are to be reaped. It has already been stressed that if this act of emancipation is accomplished by the proper measures it will strengthen the economic stability of the protectorate."

"The prosperity of the Sierra Leone Protectorate depends on the production of palm kernels and palm oil. When the slaves are liberated, they should be free to gather ketupis and oil in the deeper recesses of the forest, and under proper organization the output of these products ought to be greatly increased."

Lady Simon stressed the fact that slavery still exists in several other parts of the world. She commented:

"There are, of course, several other countries where there are large numbers of slaves still, and the disheartening part of it is that public opinion remains apathetic."

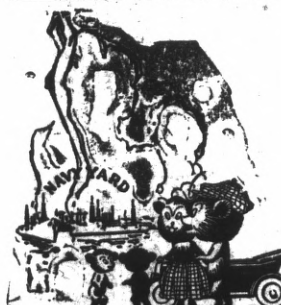

IN OTHER NATIONS

"Take Abyssinia, which is one of the blackest slave districts in the world. Signor Salandra, in 1923, drew the attention of the League of Nations to the terrible fate of a convoy of slaves. A hundred and fifty of these poor wretches, in chains and yokes, were being driven to the coast for trans-shipment, when another party of slave traders fell upon the gang and their captors with such murderous results that thirty of the slaves were killed or mutilated, and the rest were carried off by the attacking party."

"Then there is China, where so far as we can gather, there are more than two million of child slaves. One of the systems is that of 'Mist Tea', or the selling of surplus children by their parents. This is one of those barbarous customs which it may take many years yet to eradicate."

realization that governments exist for the people and not people for the governments.

"The United States feels, nay it knows, that our American democracy will succeed. It has faith in every one of our sister nations here assembled in Havana. It has faith in itself."

The ambassador's address was one of the features of a crowded conference day. With Argentina significantly absent, the first commission of the conference approved the project for the organization of the Pan-American union and voted to send it to the individual governments for signature.

This latter decision avoided the embarrassment created by the split between Argentina and its chief of delegation, Ambassador Ignacio Pueyrredon, as told exclusively in these dispatches last Sunday. Dr. Pueyrredon adheres firmly to his refusal to sign the project even although instructions from his government direct its acceptance. Havana continues to wait anxiously to see if the home government will accept his resignation.

Although Argentina's protest still stood officially, so far as the conference was concerned, the first commission named Dr. Pueyrredon as one of the members of the first sub-committee to prepare the official draft of the union treaty and also a resolution for the operation of the union pending the ratification of the treaty by the 21 republics. Both the first commission and the commission on international law will meet tomorrow morning in their effort to speed up their work before the adjournment scheduled for Monday.

The full plenary conference of the congress also met today to ratify the recommendations of the various commissions. These included the Pan-American motor treaty, the Pan-American motor highway project and various propositions designed to stimulate and facilitate trade among the American republics.

Dr. Pueyrredon was absent from the plenary session and Dr. Felipe Esplá, counsellor of the Embassy at Washington, acted for Argentina.

$40,000,000 OF CZAR'S MONEY NOW IN LONDON

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Speculation rife here about the amount of wealth deposited in London banks by the late Czar of Russia and now standing to the credit of his heirs. The number is revived here that the sum amounts to $40,000,000 which would be available to the mysterious Anastasia "Tschaikovsky" if she is able to prove that she is actually the youngest daughter of the emperor.

There is no authority, however, prepared to vouch for the statement that the Romanoffs have valuable deposits here or elsewhere. Dr. Edouard Leboff, leading expert of Russia, said today: "Much has long been heard about alleged deposits and investments in foreign banks and commercial undertakings made by the late czar. Some authorities assert that all these monies were withdrawn during the war, but others say with equal vehemence that large sums are still outstanding to the credit of his heirs."

"There is a certain amount of probability about the latter contention in view of the fact that withdrawal during the war would have been extremely difficult."

"It is not easy to estimate the value of these deposits, although the Bolsheviks in their early days ignorantly confusing private and government accounts, mentioned a sum as great as a thousand million dollars. Anyway, the legend of a fabulous fortune has attracted a number of pretenders. There are in Russia alone six would-be czars, half a dozen would-be czarevitchs and a number of 'miraculously escaped' grand dukes."

"Soviet writers say that nearly every prison in Russia boasts one, two, or three pretenders to the throne."

Foreign banks themselves decline information, and in any event, it is declared, the Romanoff holdings would be in the name of nominees.

HULL SCORES NAVY BUILDING AS PEACE AIM

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—George Washington cited an "ancient fallacy" when he said, "In time of peace prepare for war." Prof. William I. Hull of Swarthmore College told the House Naval Affairs committee today.

Hull was appealing with others against the administration's navy building program.

It is a "debatable question" whether the American colonists were justified in going to war with Great Britain in 1776 he said, causing derisive laughter from committee members.

Dr. Hull, who said he has taught history and international relationship at Swarthmore for 35 years, flatly refused to say he could conceive of a condition that would warrant armed conflict by the United States.

President Coolidge is "dead wrong" in advocating a naval building program on the ground that it will help preserve world peace, Dr. Hull said, declaring that "history shows that big armies and navies lead to wars."

Committee members repeatedly accused Dr. Hull of evading their questions. They chided him for "dodging" their inquiries, aimed at justifying adequate national defense.

Hull said he represented the World Alliance for International Friendship and Church Peace Union, comprising Protestants, Jews, and Roman Catholics. He was accompanied by Linley V. Cordun, secretary of the union, and Dr. Arthur J. Brown, secretary of the Presbyterian general missionary board.

Hull claimed that the administration's shipbuilding program has stirred suspicion of other nations; that it menaces the peace of the world and is an extravagant venture.

"I would turn my back on the entire building program and work for world disarmament, because that is the goal to keep in mind," said Dr. Hull.

"Your ideals are fine but we cannot accomplish them by evading up their navies and we have got to be prepared for war, while we work for peace," said Rep. Britton, Republican of Illinois.

"Every true American will resist and resist the preposterous and dangerous proposition which has been presented to you," said Dr. Hull.

"You haven't any program," shouted Britton.

Branches of the International Organization for Peace are appealing to the British government to stop its navy building. Dr. Hull said. He said he had a high regard for President Coolidge's economy plans, but that he could not reconcile the navy-building plan with economy.

"The President knows more about international relations than anyone else. Don't you think it would be well for us to follow his advice?" asked Britton.

"No. He is dead wrong when he says this is an insurance against war," replied Hull.

"How big a navy do you think we ought to have?" asked Britton. "I don't know."

When Rep. Andrew (R) of Massachusetts asked him if he thought the nation should have a navy, Dr. Hull said he would have to consider the question: "I would favor a navy to catch pirates," he said.

"The trouble with a naval program is that it provokes war," he added.

Despite repeated pressing by Andrew as to whether he thought the United States should disarm while all other nations refuse to limit armament, Dr. Hull evaded the question.

Updike (R) of Indiana told him that the United States tried in vain last summer to reach an agreement with Great Britain and Japan to limit armaments.

"I would drop this program cold and go to the British people for a conference on disarmament. Our world alliance is trying to do that," said Hull.

The Geneva conference failed because "the admirals" were in command of it, Hull said, continuing:

"We are working for the peace plan laid down by William Penn in 1693. I have no faith in the opinions of the naval experts on our needs, because all history is dead against them."

WESTMINSTER TO ENSHRINE EARL OXFORD

By ROBERT J. PREW
Universal Service Staff
Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Westminster Abbey will enshrine another great national figure this week in the remains of the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, if plans made today meet the approval of Lady Oxford. The closing hours of the great liberal statesman this morning were characterized by the touching devotion and poignant grief of his celebrated wife. Since Friday night when Lord Oxford's condition became critical she had not been to bed but remained untiringly at his side or within immediate call.

The doctors have expressed their astonishment that Lord Oxford was able to hold out for so long, for when he lapsed into unconsciousness on Sunday afternoon he was already an exhausted man. Death came this morning just as dawn was breaking and in the presence of the principal members of the family.

It was with difficulty that Lady Oxford was persuaded to leave the death bed. She then collapsed and for the remainder of the day her daughters were in constant attendance on her. It is hoped tonight she will be recovered sufficiently to express her wishes regarding the funeral.

An intimate friend of the family tonight disclosed to Universal Service the little known fact that Margot was so intensely devoted to her husband that throughout the thirty-four years of their married life, she never failed to send him a daily message if she was not with him. During her recent American tour she did not allow a single day to pass without dispatching a cablegram to him.

King George and Queen Mary led off the stream of messages of sympathy for Margot which flowed in from all parts of the world to the picturesque country home at Sutton, Courtney.

The House of Commons will adjourn tomorrow as a mark of national sorrow, after all the political leaders have paid their tributes of words.

HIGH CAGERS TO MEET THE SAINTS FROSH

When the Richmond high boomsters meet the St. Mary's Frosh in the preliminary to the St. Mary's-Nevada game at Kezar Stadium Saturday night there will be presented a chance for the local boys to walk away with the prize, providing DeBarre, Jackson, and Melin get their eye on the bucket.

Coach Ivan Hill has been rounding the boys into shape and is using the same attack that has featured the wins put over by the team this season.

Baldwin and Jackson are also on the list of those who deserve mention for basket shooting honors and they will be looked to for their share of the points to be made.

As the St. Mary's Frosh have lost to the California Frosh the boys feel that they have more than an even chance for the Berkeley boys were barely able to beat them by one point.

Men to be started by Coach Hill will probably be DeBarre and Jackson, forwards; Baldwin, center; and Swenson and Williams, guards.

PIN RESULTS IN S. O. LEAGUE

Last night ended the Standard Oil Bowling League when two of the six scheduled games were forfeited.

Teams as they finished were:
1—Barrel House.
2—Pipe Shop.
3—Labor Department.
4—Shipping Office.
5—Boiler Shop.
6—Shook Factory.
7—Machine Shop.
8—Engineers.
9—Mystery Team.

The Engineers forfeited to the Shook Factory and Machine Shop No. 1 took a game from Boiler Shop No. 1 when the latter failed to appear. In the one game rolled the Mystery team came through with a win over the Shipping Office by the score of 2055 to 1964. Shook factory and Machine shop felt like rolling the balls so a warming-up exercise was had in practice for the finals to rolled next week. Teams to compete in the finals will be the Barrel House, Pipe Shop, Labor Department, and the Shook Factory.

Following are the scores made on the alleys.

TAM SPEAKS ABOUT HIS BROADWAY
Walter Winchell writes about "Your Broadway and Mine." It may be HIS Broadway, but believe me, brother, what follows was MY Broadway. THAT was a stem, and if you'll hop up beside me and get an eyeful of what follows as we go along, I think you'll agree with me that it was the greatest one-mile stretch that ever bore a Mala Street signpost.

We start off at the old Bartholdi Hotel, which was on the south-east corner of 23d Street and the Main Drag. Milton Robles was the boss there and it was always a great spot for the mob. You could see Stanley Ketchell and Tim Harst having a playful little argument. In would breeze Wilson Mizner, then Paul Armstrong, sometimes with Missouri Bill, and after a fight dear old Charley White. Armstrong wrote "Jimmy Valentine" there, as well as writing the "Deep Purple" with Wilson Mizner. William Faversham was one of the regulars, too.

Across the street was the Fifth Avenue Hotel with its famous Amen Corner, where you could always find Tom Platt, Teddy Roosevelt or George Manchester. Once in a while August Belmont dropped in. Then one walked a block up to the Hoffman House with its million dollar oil paintings and the best cocktails in town. The house Dick was George Ross, and he knew all the phonies. The "cannon" seldom worked there. Around the corner on 25th Street was a swell gambling house, where the best buys in New York were wont to gamble on the green cloth.

A SAWBUCK WENT A LONG, LONG WAY
Across the street, at 26th Street, was the Victoria Hotel. If you were thirsty you'd drop in for a nice cool beer, or a cocktail—20 cents straight. They had great food and a marvelous host—I think his name was Sweeney. Then on 26th Street and the Avenue—I mean Fifth Avenue—was the famous Delmonico's. A guy could take his girl to a show, have a good feed at Del's and get change out of a saw-buck.

At 28th Street were Everard's Baths if one was tired, and around the corner in 29th Street were all kinds of clubs where you could find wine, women, song and games of all kinds. Weber and Fields was on Broadway near 29th Street, where Jerome Sykes was the big draw. Louis Cohen used to sell tickets in the lobby. I can remember Peter P. Dalley, Lillian Russell, David Warfield, Bonnie Magin, Fay Templeton, Johnny Miller, Lotta Faust and many other stars of the day.

The good shows used to be put on at Wallack's, at 30th Street, and Del's next door to Weber and Fields, housed Amelia Bingham in her big hit, "The Climbers." Right near her was the first Chinese food shop on the Main Stem. Shan Lee's, it was called. At 32d Street was the Imperial Hotel, where Johnny Mack was the night manager. A great guy, Johnny, with lots of friends and good to the broken guys. Poor Johnny, he went West.

Where you'll find Gimbel's today you used to find Bill Brady's Standard Theatre, and on the corner Trainor's Hotel, where the bunch used to drift in. Then we hit Jim Corbett's place, where Saks' now is, and across the street was Martin's Cafe, where the best lunch in town was to be had at noontime. On 35th Street was the Hotel Aulic. Many a night Dan Daly would flop in there after playing at the Park Theater just across the street.

THE DANCE CRAZE STARTED AT MAXIM'S
On the other side of 6th Avenue was New Harrigan's hangout. Jim Young's restaurant was on 6th Avenue, just across from the Herald. At 36th Street and Broadway we hit the Marlborough. Good eats and plenty of good liquor. Nearly all the swell Englishmen stopped there. Under the Normandie was Kid McCoy's rathskeller. On 38th Street was Maxim's where the dance craze started with Charley McHugh and Nellie Woods, the first pair to dance the tango and lead it to jazz.

Of course, the grape flowed freely in those days. The boys who handled it were George Kessler, who took care of Mumm's Extra Dry, Manny Chappelle, who had White Seal, and Hector MacKenzie, who took care of the Clicquot. Bob Vernon handled dear old Pommery, and he was always to be seen on the opening nights of all the shows. Many a tip he gave me for calling him a cab. Diamond Jim Brady once slipped my fifty bucks for picking up one of his emeralds, which had dropped out of his shirt front.

NO ONE MISSED THE METROPOLE
Then we hit the Rossmore Hotel, next door to the Metropole, where Danny Maher, Dick Clawson, Ieman Spencer, Tommy Burns, Arthur Redfern, Grover Cleveland Fuller, Patsy Barrett and lots of the other well-known jockeys used to hang out. George Considine ran the Metropole. Big Tim Sullivan and Little Tim were always there. Tim Payne, George Wheelock, Joe Vendig, Macey Blumenthal, Bill Cowan, Eddie Burke and all the other big bookies of the day were there, to say nothing of the boxers: Jim Jeffries, Kid McCoy, Gus Ruhlin, and Tom Sharkey once in a while; Terry McGovern, Young Corbett, Kid Lavigne, Joe Gans, Frank Erne and Sammy Kelly, Armstrong, Mizner, Nat Goodwin, Sam Harris, Leander Sire, Charles Frohman, Alf Hayman and all the big mugs of the theatrical world would drop in. It was the meeting place of the world, and thinking about it brings tears to my eyes.

WHEN THERE WERE FOUR COHANS
In those days the greatest team of song writers was Cobb and Edwards. Jerome and Schwartz, Paul Dresser, Frank Mills and a few others whose monickers I've forgotten were great, too. Witmark was the big cheese among the publishers. George Cohan was then with the Four Cohans, consisting of Jerry, Josephine, Helen and George. They sure did get wows out of the audiences, and George is still there. Then the Four Mortons—Sam, Kitty, Clara and Paul. They sure fooled them with their Irish ways. Kitty's buck dance and Clara's "It."

Yes, Eddie, my boy, it was a STEM, and you would have loved it. We'll never see anything like it again. And by the way, you must come and see me in my new show, "Spring 3100." Cheerio, old kid!

DUAL REGATTA LOOMS FOR CAL AND OREGON

BERKELEY, Feb. 15.—A dual regatta between the University of California and Oregon State college crews looms as a possibility in the near future, as a result of the spurt in interest and increase in number of oarsmen turning out at the northern institution.

One hundred and fifty students—almost as many as turn out here for the Golden Bear crew—have joined the Oregon State rowing club, and are working out on the Willamette river course under the direction of coaches W. A. "Bud" Kearns and J. C. Othuis. In addition to the two racing shells donated last fall by the University of California, a new training barge was delivered and christened this week "Rho Delta Rho" was the name chosen as most appropriate for the craft where novice crewmen will get their elementary training.

Since last fall the Oregon Sisters have made great progress in crew, having acquired in addition to their floating equipment a shell house, training quarters, a float and two coaches. First races will be held later in the spring when the interclass regatta is run off, and the University of Washington is planning to send down a crew for a special dual race later in the season.

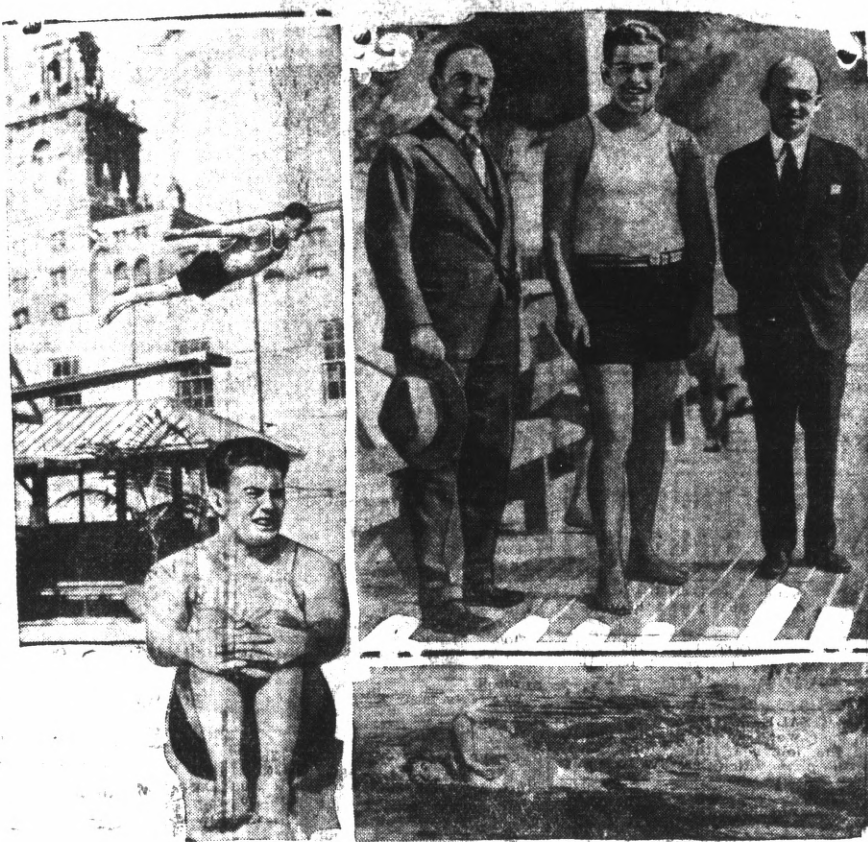

The proposal has been made that one or more of the California crews might stop off at Vovallis on the way back from their regatta with Washington in April. If such a race with Oregon State should take place this spring it would be simply a practice contest, but prospects are that in 1929 the Websters will be in a position to afford some genuine competition.

Jim Kahn FAIR OR FOUL

Prof. Miller Huggins, that astute little pilot who puts ball teams together and makes them win just like that, expounded on his theories in the Yankee office yesterday and cleverly revealed the inner workings of a master mind in the act of plotting how to win ten straight pennants.

His theories are a trifle revolutionary, but appear to be sound. They would probably startle Dr. Leolinus Silviensis, professor of fustical philosophy in the University of Brentford, who always preached, "Strengthen your WEAK spots," but research of the most

How A Heavyweight Champion Winters

GENE TUNNEY, the heavyweight champion, continue to enjoy the balmy climate of Miami Beach in unaccustomed tranquillity, while Tex Rickard stays up nights trying to dig up a challenger who will make the turnstiles go 'round in June. Upper left shows the champion, who almost as good a swimmer as he is a boxer, going off the ten-foot board at the Roney Plaza Pool, and below he suns himself on the beach. Upper right, Gene, a little round around the middle, with Martin Malone and N. B. T. Roney, and below, the champion trudging a la Johnny Weissmuller.

FREDDIE LINDSTROM, dashing 22-year-old infielder of the New York Giants, who will marry Irene Kiedisch February 14. The two will make the Giants' training trip their honeymoon. Here's Freddie and his wife to be, shaking hands with Joe Wintry, Loyola University player, who will try out with the Giants. Freddie was grabbed from Loyola when he was 18, years old. Fred is one of the youngest veterans in baseball, a smart, experienced third baseman at 22.

diligent kind fails to show that Dr. Silviensis ever managed a pennant winner.

Prof. Huggins says, "Strengthen your STRONG spots," which, while apparently contrary to current practices, listened very well as he elaborated upon it. "Ruth and Gehrig are the big possible-deal involving Mike Garmon on my team, aren't they?" ella. The Yanks haven't any deals asked Hug. "Well, if one gets hurt I have to put some one just as strong in his place, or one as near his capabilities as I can get. Almost any one can fill in a weak spot. It's the strong spots I have to look out for and safeguard."

Accordingly, it was deduced that understudies for Ruth and Gehrig were essential on a team such as Prof. Huggins hopes to pilot for a long time to come, and out of these deductions came the admission that Hug would like to get George Burns, Cleveland first baseman, as a substitute for Gehrig, or Joe Judge of the Senators as a second choice Ben making no efforts to get further outfield talent. But he would go for a first baseman who could play regularly in an emergency.

A deal was once in the making between the Indians and the Yankees which would have brought Walter Lutzke, third baseman, and Burns to New York for Joe Dugan, but it didn't go through. Yesterday Hug said he wouldn't swap Jumping Joe for Burns. In fact, he intimated that no swapping of any kind would be done by the Yanks with the exception of the Horseshoe games of an exciting nature are being played daily by members of the Standard Oil Horseshoe club in a tournament that is nearing its close. Games are being played on the grounds near the cafeteria in the refinery yard.

S. OIL LEAGUE HORSESHOERS IN LAST ROUND

J. U. Craig of the Barrel House and Hubert Holland of the same department head the two teams of eleven players each. Players on both sides are so evenly matched that picking a winner at this time is uncertain.

Each player opposes each member of the rival team in one game and the team having the most wins at the close wins the tournament. At the conclusion of the present series a banquet will be held in the Hotel Carquinez by the members of both teams and others interested in the sport have been invited to attend.

Because of the interest manifested in the game four additional courts have been requested by the players.

About April 2 play for the Superintendent's cup will start and all games played in this contest will be handicap affairs, as agreed upon by the donor and those competing for the prize.

In 1926 the cup was won by J. U. Craig of the Barrel House and in 1927 Frank Muzzi (now deceased) was the winner.

The two previous winners were from the Barrel House, and as the cup is a permanent trophy for the team winning the medal three consecutive years, there is a big indication that the cup will go into the hands of the Barrel House, as that department has a strong team in the field. J. U. Craig, J. W. Newman, and A. F. Ballwanz are some of the representatives of the Barrel House team.

"I done read a book by a man named Willie Shakespeare called, 'De tamin ob de Shrew.'—GARDEN OF THE SHAH.

on now, but Hug is hopeful that he'll get just one chance to do a little business that will be helpful to the Yanks before the trading season closes.

Hug explained that Larry and Reese purchase along his theories of strengthening the strong spots. If, when they report in 1929, they show even more brilliance than the present keynote pair of Koenig and Lazzeri, he gleefully points out that he will have future trading material of value equal to what the Yanks are reputed to have paid for this Coast pair; $150,000. According to how things shaped up, he'd be in a position to swap two of the quartet of Larry, Reese, Koenig and Lazzeri and retain two for his own use. Hug is always in there thinking, and it's now up to Larry and Reese not to prove busts when they come up to the big league and leave Hug with just a lot of ideas and two minor-league ball players.

The Senators and the Athletics, Hug opines, will provide the stiffest opposition to his champions this season. He doesn't consider Detroit as dangerous as the first-mentioned pair, principally because of the Tigers' lack of good pitching.

CANADA TRADE ON INCREASE REPORT SHOWS

"Exports to Canada totaled $336,000,000—A value only slightly less than that of exports to the United Kingdom, which has always been our leading customer," the Department said. "The increase of $97,000,000 over the previous year was chiefly the result of larger shipments of grains, automotive products and machinery."

"The United Kingdom, our largest export market, reduced its purchases from the United States to $132,000,000, or 14 per cent, and exports to France and Italy declined 13 per cent."

On the other hand, most of the leading European countries took larger quantities of our exports, the increase in shipments consigned to Germany alone were $17,000,000, or 32 per cent. This gain in exports to Germany was attributable in part to larger purchases of cotton copper and automotive products.
